August 7, 2018 – Kenmore, WA – Phase 4 Design, Inc. has been awarded a new four year contract for maintenance and engineering of Washington State Fish and Wildlife RoIP Enforcement Dispatch and Radio Communications Systems across the entire state.

Washington's Electronic Business Solution (WEBS) Website posts an award for the following opportunity:

Title: Radio Over Internet Protocol (RoIP) Network Consulting Services

Description: Consultation, maintenance, technical assistance, training and engineering services to support WDFW's communication network using Radio over IP (RoIP). This network integrates a Session Initiated Protocol (SIP) telephone system, and a Land Mobile Radio/ Long Term Evolution (LMR/LTE) interface. These systems are primarily using TELEX components to deliver communications across state government-owned/operated internet and radio repeater systems.

Customer Reference Number: 18-00022

Awarded Vendors: PHASE 4 DESIGN INC

"I feel it is an honor for us to be selected in of a field of 23 applicants", Grant says. Being responsible for a system with statewide radio coverage is very complicated and it requires a very special set of skills. That is what Phase 4 Design brings to the table.
